Utt and Enoch Spaulding and had a great reputation in the Missouri valley. Mr. Utt was its first landlord and after several years Mr. Spaulding took charge. Since that time it has had many landlords but has always been a part of the Utt estate until Friday. In the early days it was the til Friday. In the early days it was the headquarters of Majors Russels and Wadding, government contractors, who had their supplies here and shipped them overland to the western forts. There was also a U. It was a popular place with the Jayhawkers. Yet during those wild days there was no scenes of violence enacted under its roof. Many births and marriages have taken place in the building. There has been many a brilliant company gathered in its parlors nd the large during room attended by beautiful women and brave men from Nebraska, Kausas and Missouri.
